Remarks of
GOVERNOR LEROY COLLINS
to
Democratic National Convention
Los Angeles, California

1110

FOR RELEASE 5 P. M., TUESDAY, JULY 12, 1960.

Senator Church, Chairman Butler, delegates:

It is with much pride that I take up this gavel and accept the opportunity to serve our party and our nation as your permanent chairman. I shall do my best to serve with fairness and efficiency.

To try to fill the boots of a Texan under any circumstances is difficult. This is especially so when that Texan is the Honorable Sam Rayburn, distinguished Speaker of the House, who has served with conspicuous competence as permanent chairman of our past three national conventions.

I am sustained, however, as I accept these responsibilities, by the continued presence on the rostrum of our able parliamentarian of so many past conventions, Honorable Clarence Cannon, congressman from Missouri.

Delegates, it is serious business that brings us here. In the air as we meet there is a compelling sense of history, of urgency.

Each of us, I believe, understands the obligation we share not to make this just another political convention -- the kind which appears to so many Americans and to people abroad as nothing more than a noise circus of partisanship. This is no time for ordinary politics.

Rather, if we can see ourselves in this circumstance of crisis we can make of this convention a kind of turning-point, where the highest hopes of a great nation are caught up and translated into action which channels the surging mainstream of American history.

--The kind of turning-point symbolized by Thomas Jefferson, who cut for us a pattern of popular government, rather than government by a ruling elite.

CONVENTION ROLL LISTS 466 DELEGATES AND ALTERNATES OF RECENT IMMIGRANT ORIGIN

The Temporary Roll of Delegates and alternates to the 1960 Democratic National Convention includes 466 persons of immigrant or first-generation citizenship of other than English-speaking background, Senator Theodore Francis Green (D., R. I.) stated today. Senator Green is the founder and Honorary Chairman of the Nationalities Division of the Democratic National Committee.

Among the 466 the following national origins are included: Italian, 87; Polish, 74; Jewish, 69; Scandanavian countries, 58; German, 38; Slavonic countries (Czech, Slovak, Ukrainian, Yugoslav, others) 67; Greek, 31; others, 42.

"This represents a really significant development -- it is proof that the Democratic Party is truly the party of all the people," said Senator Green.

"I am especially happy that we have present today the Chairman of our newest nationality section, which is really the oldest one-- namely, the American Indian Democratic Organization. It was an encouraging evidence of the good work this Division has done during the past 12 years of its existence, when a group of leaders of the Indian tribes came to us and proposed the creation of an American Indian section. We felt that in accepting this proposal, they should become an Honorary Section -- for, after all, they were the first Americans. Counting the Indians, we now have organizations affiliated with the Democratic Party representing citizens of 28 diverse national origins -- all good Americans, of whom we are proud," Senator Green concluded.

Gov. G. Mennen Williams, present Chairman of the Nationalities Division, praised the Platform Committee's recommendation for creation of a Federal Bureau of Intergroup Relations. "Such a bureau," he said, "would greatly strengthen democracy in America, by of the Convention and of the Country,

Although I feel sometimes that I have grown old in the service of the Party, I still am a Young Democrat and speak to you for them.

We are extremely proud of the part that we have played in the Democratic Party as can be best evidenced by the fact that nearly 500 of the delegates and alternates to this convention are Young Democrats and we have important posts on all of the committees.

It will be enlightening for you to observe the contrast in this regard when the convention of the other party takes place this month.

The ideals we "youngsters" have and the things we want are no different than what you want, it is just that youth boldly and rashly faces the enigmas that must be solved. We would rush down from the sheltered hills into the open mouth of the valley where the enemy lies waiting, whereas most of you would wait until the artillery were moved into position before attacking.

The young are impatient to right the many wrongs they see. They demand that the corrections be made immediately, this

CONVENTION BRIEFS

Tennessee delegates vowed to stay with Sen. Lyndon Johnson to the bitter end and will keep voting for him until released.

A mother-son combination cropped up among the delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Youthful Sheldon Freed is a delegate from the Canal Zone while his mother, Mrs. Myra Freed, is an alternate with the Pennsylvania delegation.

-0-

The delegates from the Far South are happy with Los Angeles "cool" weather. The Canal Zone delegation says they're used to 88 to 99 degree temperature with 80 to 90 percent humidity.

-0-

The Pennsylvania delegation lays claim to two of the oldest delegates at the convention. Hiram Andrews, speaker of the state's House of Representatives, is 84, and Emma Guffy Miller, a delegate, is 86. Emma had a champagne party thrown for her on the jet plane Saturday enroute to the convention as it was her 86th birthday.

-0-

The 64, out of 81, votes for Kennedy polled for the Pennsylvania delegation has now reached 70 in a more recent poll.

-0-

A delegate from Pennsylvania claims to be the father of the most children among delegates attending the Democratic National Convention. John E. McGrady, a majority commissioner of Albuquerque County, has 13 children.

-0-

The Democratic National Convention is also serving as a honeymoon for one of the delegates who was married Saturday (July 8) and flew directly out here with his delegation and bride. He's Horace J. Culbertson, an alternate delegate from Pennsylvania.

REMARKS BY JOHN C. CORNELIUS, PRESIDENT

THE AMERICAN HERITAGE FOUNDATION

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION

Los Angeles, Calif., July 12, 1960

7 P.M. - PDT

Mr. Chairman, Fellow-Americans

This could happen only in America -- a representative of a nonpartisan organization participating in this great convention.

This is an inspiring sight -- hundreds of good citizens who have come from every part of the land on their own time and at their own expense, because they are vitally concerned with the kind of world that we and our children will live in. While all of us, of course, can't become convention delegates, each in his own way can respond to the question-of-the-hour, "What can I do to help our country?"

One thing each of us can do is to strengthen our vital two-party system, the mainspring of our democracy that we Americans often take for granted. Too few of us are active party members. Too few of us contribute to a party -- with the unhealthy result that 90 per cent of political financing is contributed by one per cent of the people.

Modern political campaigns cost a lot of money. This year more than 800,000 officials will be elected at all levels of government.

LEADING EDITORIAL ENDORSEMENTS: STEVENSON FOR PRESIDENT

F.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH (June 12, 1960) "The Democrat's Best Candidate"

We believe the Democrats, who already have a healthy contest going, can choose their best candidate by nominating Adlai E. Stevenson. Of all the Democratic candidates, in our opinion, Adlai Stevenson is the ablest and best fitted. He possesses the firmest grasp of a world situation that confronts our nation with the supreme challenge of its history. He has had successful executive experience as the Governor of an important state. He has undergone rigorous training in democratic leadership by heading his party for eight years and in two national campaigns. To buttress his valuable experience in the United Nations he has traveled widely and studied at first hand every part of the world. Beyond doubt he is the one Democratic candidate who commands the deepest confidence of our allies. He is mature, tested, responsible, intelligent and creative.

Mr. Stevenson's superior qualifications are, in fact, generally conceded among Democrats. The principal argument against him is that, because he lost to President Eisenhower twice, he could not win against another opponent. This is a myth of expediency which has no basis in history or logic....

Mr. Stevenson has demonstrated, at some political risk, his readiness to draw the issues sharply on foreign policy. While President Eisenhower was in Paris, Mr. Stevenson loyally supported him, but when the conference had ended he spoke his mind boldly. We think he was right in his criticism, but whether one agrees or disagrees it is highly important that those who differ from the Administration should say so. To blur the issues, to envelop debate in a fog of misplaced calls for unity, to equivocate on problems which might determine the very future of mankind, would be a grave disservice to the American people.

In 1956, Mr. Stevenson was attacked for advocating a voluntary suspension of detectable H-bomb coupled with serious efforts to negotiate an internationally inspected ban on all tests. That is precisely the policy the Eisenhower Administration is now following— but following in response to Soviet initiative rather than our own, as Mr. Stevenson advocated. This kind of farsighted and constructive contribution to foreign policy is needed this year as never before....

On the basis of the alternatives and conditions today, our choice for the Democratic nomination is Adlai E. Stevenson...

SACRAMENTO NEWS (June 8, 1960) "State's Democratic Delegation Should Vote For Stevenson"

Adlai Stevenson for President....

This is a time of crisis in the affairs of our nation and of the entire world. The future of the country and the fate of the world will be the paramount issue in the 1960 presidential campaign. Leadership is the prime need of the hour.

To cope with this crisis, to meet the issue headon and to present it to the people in a forthright, truthful and convincing manner, one man in the Democratic Party stands head and shoulders above all seekers after the nomination.

That man is Adlai Stevenson.

FOR RELEASE TO THURSDAY AM'S
Wednesday July 13, 1960

Seconding speech for Senator Lyndon B. Johnson by Congressman Daniel K. Inouye. (D-Hawaii)

FELLOW AMERICANS.....ALOHA

I RISE WITH DEEP EMOTION AND PRIDE TO SECOND THE NOMINATION OF THE NEXT PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, OUR GREAT LEADER AND OUR GREAT FRIEND,
THE HONORABLE LYNDON B. JOHNSON.

I HAVE BEEN ASKED IN RECENT WEEKS WHY---COMING FROM HAWAII AND WITH MY RECORD AS A LIBERAL---WHY WITH THESE AND OTHER ELEMENTS IN MY BACKGROUND, I TAKE THIS POSITION SO DEEPLY AND SO EMPHATICALLY. SOME OF YOU, MY FRIENDS AND COLLEAGUES IN THIS CONVENTION, HAVE ASKED ME THIS, AND I WANT TO TELL YOU WHY.

MANY HAVE TALKED MORE---BUT NO ONE HAS DONE
MORE THAN LYNDON B. JOHNSON TO ADVANCE THE WELFARE OF OUR PEOPLE, IN EVERY SECTION OF OUR COUNTRY, IN EVERY WALK OF LIFE, WITHOUT PREJUDICE OR BITTERNESS

From: AFL-CIO

Al Zack, Public Relations Director
Room 538, Ambassador Hotel

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: TUESDAY, July 12, 1960

AFL-CIO President George Meany today issued the following comment on the Report of the Democratic Party Platform Committee:

"This is a sound, liberal platform--the most progressive and most constructive in my memory.

"The Committee has courageously faced the No. 1 moral issue of our time--civil rights. It has proposed a program of immediate action which will meet and solve that problem. I hope it will be adopted exactly as submitted and that all crippling amendments will be overwhelmingly defeated.

"The platform merits, and I predict, will receive the enthusiastic support of every union member at this convention.

"We in the labor movement fully expect that the candidates of the Democratic Party will not only run on this platform but that they will translate it into law without equivocation and without delay."

EXCERPTS FROM SPEECH DELIVERED BY MRS. HELEN FISHER, A MODERN FORTY-NINER, ON THE NEW AMERICAN POWER FRONTIER

PROJECT 'BROKEN PROMISES' TO BE CAMPAIGN ISSUE

Seven years of stalling by Republicans on Federal power projects has been reported to Chester Bowles, Democratic Platform Committee Chairman by Mrs. Helen M. Fisher, delegate from the forty-ninth State, as follows:

Alaska, with its arctic-fed, silt-free rivers, could have become the powerhouse for the world with hydro-electric dams needed for atomic energy production. Our forty-ninth State has the power potential to surpass even the 123 sites for hydro-electric dams on the Columbia River in the region of Washington, but since the Republicans have closed their eyes to recommendations of U.S. Army engineers this has proved impossible. Engineers urged the federal development of Alaskan water power--as well as that of the Columbia--as essential to the future security of the free world. Arctic-fed rivers are high in water content when other rivers of the nation are not. Being arctic-fed, Alaskan rivers have two other natural assets vital to atomic energy production: cold water and freedom from silt.

The breaking of their power platform promises by the Republican Party should not have been unexpected by the American people. The Republican traditional attitude toward the natural resources of our country is that they are to be given to private utilities for personal profit. The tradition and performance of the Democratic Party is to utilize all natural resources for public service use through projects owned by all the people. The 1960 Democratic Party platform, on the preparation of which I have had the privilege of participating, is still another proof that the Democratic Party is the Party of the people -- the Party that keeps its promises!" said Mrs. Helen M. Fisher, delegate from Alaska.

HUGE PRO-ADLAI CROWD ARTS OTHERS' TO A

Stevenson Touched By Rally

"I'm afraid I can't speak at all here," Adlai Stevenson remarked, as he was interrupted repeatedly by a wildly cheering crowd of over 10,000 that had stood in scorching heat for over two and one-half hours Saturday afternoon at International Airport awaiting his delayed plane.

This was an emotional moment for the man from Illinois and for the multitudes of supporters on hand to greet him, and Stevenson met it in characteristic fashion, with the humor that one sometimes finds in a mask of fear. It was a mood shared by his friends.

"I never thought this convention was rigged," he continued, "until I was put down in the middle of the Nevada desert in 100-degree heat this afternoon and you were kept waiting here for two hours. You're probably the most heat-resistant bunch of supporters anyone ever had. Apparently in Los Angeles they like their egghheads hard-boiled."

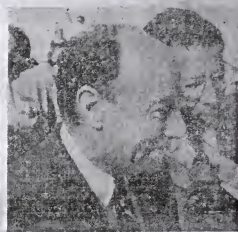

The "egghheads" included whole families, persons in casual clothes, mostly married couples, and work clothes. They were clearly a cross section of convention visitors, delegates, and residents of the Los Angeles area. They were also, clearly, a crowd united in their respect and affection for Stevenson.

Crowd Shows Patience
It was a crowd rather frazzled by heat, hunger, and thirst, carrying signs that in some instances bore the stamp of "do it yourself" efforts both in content and design. Other signs and banners had been supplied by Stevenson headquarters at 353 South Hill street.

It was an amazingly patient crowd that stood in the sun getting mildly or severely burned, depending on complexion tints and the supply of sun hats. Flattest younger persons sometimes sat on the hot pavement or perched on parked cars, places, and sound or television equipment.

Some older persons tried these relaxed postures occasionally only to get cramps, "It's a guess standing is better," rubbing cramped calves and legs. The children didn't cry. No body pushed or reproached anybody else, even when the long wait they had diffi-

GLOWING WITH THE WARMTH OF 10,000 CHEERS, Adlai E. Stevenson arrived yesterday at International Airport to be greeted by larger crowds than have ever turned out at the airport, according to the Los Angeles Police Department.

'Avalanches' Converge On Convention

Thousands of enthusiastic Stevenson supporters are converging on Los Angeles from north, east and south in two motorcades and one trainload, all picking up additional adherents in cities, towns and villages along the way.

Huge crowds in virtually every major population center have been slowing down the progress of the Stevenson Avalanches, which originally started out from Washington, New York and Texas and are expected here today. Cars have been added to the motorcades in Chicago, St. Louis, Seattle, Kansas City, Cleveland, Oklahoma City, Terre Haute, Minneapolis, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, to mention just a few. The idea for an "Avalanche for Stevenson" motorcade originated with two young New Yorkers, Jacques Kufnerman, artist, and Doris Stahl, teacher, early this week declared they could no longer express their desire to be at the convention and work actively for their candidate.

The movement was organized in 30 hours. With them is a beagle hound, Mr. Sam, wearing a large Stevenson button beneath his neck, and a snowball pushed in dry ice. Tom Finletter presented them with the cushion on which the snowball rests in a New York ceremony Wednesday just before they embarked. Jacques and Doris made the snowball with dry ice and are adding to it at each special stop. They will present it to Gov. Stevenson at the Beverly Hills Hotel tonight.

A mobile Stevenson Headquarters left Alaska, Wednesday morning in a 52-ton trailer on a four-day "Stevenson Avalanche" to Los Angeles. It was delayed 30 minutes Friday in Oregon City, Ore., when the chief of police stopped it, demanding he be allowed to sign an Adlai Stevenson-for-President petition.

Welcome Breaks Airport's Record

Adlai E. Stevenson was greeted tumultuously at Los Angeles International Airport late yesterday with cheers from a crowd far larger than the combined crowds which met Sen. Johnson, Symington, and Kennedy.

More than 10,000 people, the largest crowd ever to gather at International Airport, turned out for Governor Stevenson in a spontaneous demonstration of his tremendous nationwide support.

Stevenson Friday had announced that he would accept the nomination if it were offered and was a hard-hitting campaigner for his November election.

His plane was two hours late because of an unscheduled refueling stop in Las Vegas, Nov. He expressed satisfaction at returning to "the place of my birth," and in a reference to the airline, the crowd's long wait under a merciless sun and his own wait in a Nevada desert country, he said, "They must want their egghheads hard-boiled."

On hand to welcome Stevenson at planeside were Lt. Gov. and Mrs. Glenn Anderson of California, former Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter, Sen. Richard Richards, County Chairman Dan Rose, County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, Hahn's backback, movie producer Don Schary, and actress Jan Sterling, a member of the official reception committee.

Accompanied by Family
Accompanying Stevenson on the flight from Chicago were his three sons and daughter-in-law.

"Please don't let us down!" a girl at planeside shouted.

"I'm afraid that's not up to me," Stevenson said.

Miss Sterling said the turnout for Stevenson was the largest in her memory for a Democratic candidate during a convention.

Police Captain Robert W. Richards, in charge of the efficient police detail, said the crowd was so big he had no criterion for measuring it. But he did say it was by far the largest he ever assembled there, and bigger than the crowds of all other candidates combined. Richards estimates pegged the Kennedy crowd at 3,500. "Several hundred" showed up for both Sen. Johnson, who arrived Friday night, and Sen. Symington, who flew Friday night for the Kennedy's arrival Saturday.

Stars Present
Television crews estimated the pre-Stevenson crowd at 10,000 to 12,000.

Many of Hollywood's top stars were in the crowd. Miss Sterling identified those from the movie world as Henry Fonda, Vanessa Brown, Robert Ryan, James Whitmore, Jack Lemmon, Anthony Franciosa, Mercedes McCambridge, Gardner McKay, Mal Powers, Margalo Moore, Vincent Price, Hugo Ludwig, Karl Malden, Ann Seymour and George Stevens Jr.

A reception was held Saturday night for Stevenson in the Pasadena home in which Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will live during the convention.

A group of leaders in the California Democratic Council has mailed a letter to the members of the California delegation urging their support of Senator John F. Kennedy.

The C.D.C. group included four congressional district directors of the organization as well as chairmen of assembly district councils and club presidents.

The letter stated that "of all announced candidates Senator Kennedy comes closest to adhering to the state's traditions and philosophy of the California Democratic Council and the Los Angeles Democratic Central Committee."

Kennedy Drive Gets Aid of Southerner

Senator Kennedy's drive for the Democratic Presidential nomination Saturday drove a wedge in the Southern support of Senator Johnson.

The Massachusetts Senator's expectations of an early ballot win were strengthened when Terry Sanford, North Carolina Democratic nominee for Governor, endorsed him at a press conference.

Sanford said of Kennedy: "He has vigor and vision and a talent for leadership which has already caught the imagination and confidence of the people."

He is mature and experienced. He has been through the trials of our generation, which both matures a man and strengthens his ideals."

Sanford, whose nomination virtually assures him of election in his state, predicted that Kennedy will get about a third of North Carolina's 37 votes on the first ballot — with Johnson receiving most of the others.

Oklahoma's Governor J. Howard Edmondson yesterday also endorsed Kennedy as the "most inspiring" for the Presidential nomination.

Sanford said his decision was made two days ago after "careful and even peaceful consideration." He said the prime issue in the campaign "is and should be the challenge that confronts our country" today.

"This challenge is a matter of national leadership, and I believe Senator Kennedy will supply that leadership for the nation," Sanford said.

Mostly clear and continued fair today and tomorrow, high expected to be about 80.

5000 At L. A. Airport Greet Sen. Kennedy

A wild, shouting crowd of thousands greeted Senator Kennedy at Los Angeles International Airport yesterday and heard him estimate his first ballot strength at more than 600.

This, he said, was not counting Pennsylvania, California, New Jersey, Kansas, Minnesota, and Iowa — favorite son states with first ballot commitments. "I am quite confident I am going to get the 161 votes I need for nomination from these states," he said.

At a press conference, the Senator was asked if he thought the anticipated endorsement of Kennedy by California Gov. Edmund G. Brown, would touch off a convention steamroller.

"I would think it extremely important," Kennedy replied.

Kennedy told his cheering well-wishers that one of the other presidential hopefuls recently said that Kennedy didn't have as many grey hairs as he does. "Well, we put that grey hair on his head and we're going to continue to do so," the Massachusetts Senator said.

He told the crowd his drive for the nomination would be successful, and would not be the result of any deals in "modern filled rooms," but the outcome of a campaign he launched last spring by entering the primaries.

Later, in a television interview, Kennedy said that the nation may be headed for an economic recession because "the economy is running down" under the Eisenhower Administration.

He added that the administration

BROWN SUPPORTS KENNEDY

Senator John F. Kennedy Sunday won an endorsement for his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination from California's Governor Edmund G. Brown.

And the Massachusetts senator drew 59½ of Illinois' 69 votes at a delegation caucus. The Illinois is moved to Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley to forecast an early ballot victory for Kennedy.

Brown issued a prepared statement to a closed meeting of the giant 81-vote delegation in which he said he would work for the nomination and election of Senator Kennedy.

He told the delegation in his prepared remarks that "you are now in a position to exercise (your) independent judgement." At a later news conference Brown said, "I do not consider that a release of the delegation."

"I am of course going to have to release the delegation at some point, but that is a matter of consideration between the delegates and myself," he said.

The California delegation will caucus again Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.

Brown predicted that Kennedy, with his support, would "win more than a majority of the votes from California."

In the Illinois poll, Senator Symington got 6½ votes, Adlai Stevenson got two, and Senator Johnson none. Symington supporter Paul Power was reported by the United Press International as saying former President Harry S. Truman's announcement that he would not Idaho Senator Frank Church opened the 1960 Democratic National Convention with a hard-hitting attack on the record of the Republican Administration in business, agriculture and foreign affairs.

The youngest member of the Senate said:
A keynote speaker is often expected to perform like a cheerleader at a pep rally. But these are solemn times that summon us to reason together. We are Democrats, not because our party has always done everything right, but because it has been the principal party of progress.

No other party has furnished so many great Presidents — the author of our liberties, Thomas Jefferson; the framer of frontier freedom, Andrew Jackson; the sentinel of integrity in public office, Grover Cleveland; the scholarly architect of world order, Woodrow Wilson; the giant of humanitarian reform, Franklin Roosevelt; and that indomitable man of the people, Harry Truman!

It is no accident that big business profits are higher than ever, nor that small business is failing at a record rate. The Republicans tell us that this is due to the immutable law of "the survival of the fittest." The fittest, of course, are the biggest, as anyone knows who has ever been in an alley fight. If small business doesn't want to get licked, it will have to get out of the alley! In any case, it is "paternalism," according to the Republican rule-book, for the government to intervene as referees.

Who suffers from this pitch-man prosperity? Not just small business, but the farmers as well. This Administration has spent more money on its farm program than all previous administrations combined. Instead of declining, our surpluses have grown mammoth. Now costs us more than a billion dollars a year! For some of those who own storage bins, this may be the road to riches, but for the farmer, it is the road to ruin.

Farm income has dropped 23 percent since 1952. "Tight money" policies of this Administration have sapped our vitality and shackled (See Church, Page 2)

Star-Studded Convention Gets Rolling

Highly with some famous Hollywood stars and starlets, red, white and blue banners and an attractive, albeit sometimes restless, audience, the 1960 Democratic Convention got started with the proverbial "bang" last night.

However, the spectacular audience was not as large as anticipated, about 3,000 of the upper rooms seats being empty.

"I don't know why," said one veteran of several conventions, "unless it was the traffic problem."

And what a problem traffic was. At 5:30, a half-hour after Chairman Paul Butler had begun proceedings, the line of vehicles was still four blocks long at each end of the Arena along Figueroa Blvd.

Many of the latecomers included delegates stilled to a crawl in their buses by long lines of cars and cabs—work and convention traffic.

The long lines of traffic didn't thin out until about 6:30, according to one observer.

But cars didn't stop the only lines around the perimeter of the Arena. The lines of people with tickets trying to get in were about 20-deep at each entrance door.

Security restriction was tight on the convention floor. In order to be admitted, a person had to be wearing a blue badge. This excluded the likes of the press and even a governor—Nelson of Wisconsin—an alternate delegate, displaying only a green badge.

Many of the delegations on the floor had their own special identity. The Arizonians, for example, wore copper-colored cowboy hats; the Kansans, sunflowers; and the Michiganders, green and white polka dot tie badges.

Adds 64 Pa. Votes To Victory Drive

Governor David Lawrence threw his support to Senator John F. Kennedy and took 64 of his state's 81 votes into the Massachusetts senator's camp yesterday.

Senator Kennedy said later that he was now certain he would be nominated on the first or second ballot.

Newsmen covering the convention reported that Senator Kennedy had practically clinched an early ballot.

The United Press International tabulation gave Senator Kennedy 1581 of the necessary votes needed for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

Governor Lawrence was asked after the Pennsylvania caucus what he expected Pennsylvania to do after the first ballot and he replied: "go home."

The governor said he decided to support Kennedy because the Senator had "won in open primaries and had received 150,000 write-in votes in Pennsylvania's April 26 primary."

Lawrence said he pointed out to his delegation that he had supported Adlai E. Stevenson in the past, but that "it would be running against public sentiment in Pennsylvania if we didn't support Kennedy."

Earlier in the day, Washington Senator Henry M. Jackson announced that he will "vote for senator John F. Kennedy" for the presidential nomination.

Jackson said he had previously supported no candidate because "so many of my very good friends and fellow Senators have been seeking the Democratic Presidential nomination," but that all delegates had an obligation to decide how to cast their vote.

Also announcing for Senator Kennedy was Iowa Governor Herschel Loveless who had returned his 26-vote delegation Sunday.

Loveless told the Iowa delegates when he released them: "If I don't propose that you and I spend our efforts to be on the side of a loser — as I get busy and try to make up your own minds who can best serve us in the contest for president."

All accredited media representatives are cordially invited to use this facility, which is provided and staffed by the three railroads serving Southern California — Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific.

There will be sandwiches and other snacks, plus assorted but non-alcoholic potables. (Not even beer, says the law.) Television sets will keep lounge guests abreast of developments on the convention floor.

The hospitality lounge occupies a sunken patio-garden adjacent to the arena on the east, toward Figueroa street. It is at the level of the convention floor and can be reached from the floor perimeter through the doors at the end of the wide corridor opposite the rostrum.

From outside the building, access is by a ramp descending from street level at the main entrance to the arena.

Your official media badge will admit you at either entrance.

A DARK HORSE ON THE INSIDE TRACK?

Although not much noticed, Adlai E. Stevenson is emerging as the real "dark horse" of this presidential year.

If Senator Kennedy misses the nomination, some party professionals foresee:

- A contest between Stevenson and Symington, with the former heavily backed.

- Perhaps, eventually, a Stevenson-Kennedy ticket. This they call a "sure winner."

Meanwhile, Mr. Stevenson, twice a loser, is willing but is not seeking the nomination. He retains a solid core of party support, and is watching developments while waiting for this backing to assert itself.

WHEN LEADING DEMOCRATS get together, one question keeps cropping up: "Could it be Adlai E. Stevenson for a third time?"

Repeatedly, this statement is heard: "If Senator John F. Kennedy is stopped, the nominee will be Mr. Stevenson or Senator Stuart Symington."

Outside professional political circles, the Stevenson name is seldom mentioned. But it now develops that he is the real "dark horse" of 1960.

Mr. Stevenson himself displays no active interest in the nomination. He has no "organization," as such, working for him. For two months, he has been far from the political scene—in South America.

Yet Mr. Stevenson's name bobs up, insistently.

Why?

What accounts for this interest at top party levels in a twice-defeated candidate who today holds no public office? The answer is many-sided.

Winning ticket? Many Democrats, with an eye to the November election, are saying that, if Mr. Kennedy, a Roman Catholic from Massachusetts, is denied the nomination, it will become highly important that he be given second place on the ticket.

By such action, it is argued, the Democrats would retain many Catholic votes that otherwise might be lost.

Senator Kennedy has said emphatically that he would not take second place. Yet many feel he could be persuaded to run with Mr. Stevenson, the elder statesman who twice has had the party's highest honor.

This would not be true, politicians say, if the nomination should go to Senator Symington, of Missouri; Senator Hubert H. Humphrey, of Minnesota, or even Lyndon B. Johnson, of Texas, the Senate Majority Leader.

MOVING UP. Many Democrats see Stevenson as a winning nominee, now that Ike is not a contender

Mr. Kennedy's presence on the ticket, too, it is suggested, would serve to offset Mr. Stevenson's divorce of many years ago, a vote-costing factor in past elections.

Thus, as a matter of practical politics, some party leaders are avidly eying a Stevenson-Kennedy ticket and talking about it as a sure winner.

Another factor that keeps Mr. Stevenson in the picture is the Southern situation. Twice, Mr. Stevenson has been acceptable to most Democratic politicians from the South.

There were some defections.

The Democrats lost some Southern States, mainly as a result of Mr. Eisenhower's personal popularity.

If Mr. Stevenson is nominated, party leaders foresee a minimum possibility of any widespread and party-shattering Southern revolt.

Stevenson's support. It is widely agreed that Mr. Stevenson retains a hard core of support throughout the party.

This includes some, though by no means all, of the party's highly placed professional politicians. In the event of a Convention deadlock, it is expected that these would turn readily to the former Illinois Governor.

Governor David L. Lawrence of Pennsylvania, a Stevenson supporter in 1952 and 1958, recently reiterated his admiration. Governor Lawrence has nearly 80 Convention votes at his command.

COLLINS LEADING SPOKESMAN IN SOUTH FOR MODERATION

Florida Gov. Leroy Collins (D), a Southern spokesman for moderation at a time of severe tensions between the races, is expected to play a prominent role in the 1960 Democratic National Convention. He is not only the man chosen as permanent chairman of the convention, a position of power and importance held by House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas) since 1948, but also a potential choice of the convention for the Vice Presidential nomination. In this report, Congressional Quarterly summarizes Collins' record in public life.

Background

Tallahassee -- the "old South" of Florida -- was the scene of Collins' birth, March 10, 1909, the son of a grocery store owner and grandson of a circuit-riding Methodist minister who came to Florida from Texas around 1870. In 1927 he was graduated with honors from the Leon (Tallahassee) High School and his father agreed to match whatever amount his son could earn and save for his future education. After 18 months as a grocery clerk Collins earned enough for a course at the Eastman School of Business in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., and after two years as a bank teller he had earned enough for a one-year law course which he took at Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tenn.

After passing bar examinations in Florida, Tennessee and Arkansas, Collins began practice in Tallahassee, augmenting his income with work as a legal clerk under the Works Progress Administration. His entrance into politics was romantically instigated. In 1932 he proposed marriage to his childhood sweetheart, Mary Call Darby. Collins felt his monthly income of $34 was not enough for two persons, so he ran for the post of Leon county prosecutor. He lost the election by about 100 votes, but won his bride nevertheless. They were married June 29, 1932 and have four children (one boy, three girls), ranging in age from 10 to 26.

In 1934 Collins was elected to the state house of representatives from Leon county (which includes Tallahassee), scoring an overwhelming victory over three primary opponents. He was reelected in 1936 and 1938, and in 1940 ran successfully for an unexpired state senate term. Collins served a total of 12 years in the state senate, his service interrupted only by wartime service in the Navy, from which he was discharged with the rank of lieutenant.

As a state senator Collins sponsored legislation to raise taxes on horse and dog race betting, to finance a school building program, to end child labor, and to outlaw slot machines. He sponsored successful legislation to aid in stamping out malaria in Florida.

Collins was twice named "most valuable senator" in the St. Petersburg Times annual poll of Florida newspapermen, and in 1953 was voted "most valuable all around member" in a poll of his fellow legislators.

Governorship

In 1954 Collins ran for the unexpired term of the late Gov. Dan McCarthy (D), a close friend of Collins who had died in office. Collins' principal primary opponent was former senate president Charley E. Johns who had succeeded to the governorship on McCarthy's death (Florida has no lieutenant governor). Collins ran on a governmental reform platform, emphasizing the state's future growth and development. The race issue was no factor in the race. Collins won by a 66,125-vote margin in the second primary.

In his first inaugural address, Jan. 4, 1955, Collins outlined his approach to state government: "I want the people of Florida to understand that progress in business, industry and human welfare can only go so far with a ward-heeling, back-scratching, self-promoting political system.... Government cannot live by taxes alone or by jobs alone or even by roads alone. Government must have qualities of the spirit. Truth and justice and unselfish service are some of these. Without these qualities there is no worthwhile leadership, and we grapple and grope in a moral wilderness."

Presenting his full program to the legislature April 5, 1955, Collins urged the widest program of governmental reform ever proposed by a Florida governor. His program included: overhaul of the state's 70-year old constitution; repeal of Florida's "quickie" divorce law; a central purchasing plan for the state; establishment of a merit system for state employees; a road construction code based on proven need; six new junior colleges; and an increase in pay for teachers. Collins also called for reform of the court system to relieve pressure on the state supreme court, and an overhaul of the penal administration system.

Most state legislators reacted favorably to the Collins address. State senator R.B. (Bunn) Gautier of Miami said, "I think it was the finest message I have ever heard and was delivered by the most sincere and earnest man I have ever seen in the governor's office."

Three-quarters of the Collins proposals were subsequently enacted. Among those receiving legislature approval was a state development commission to promote Florida's industrial advantages. Collins said, "Florida stands on three sturdy legs. Tourism, Industry, Agriculture. The ultimate potential of all three has hardly been sighted, but all three must grow and thrive together, or none can survive." Accompanied by members of the development commission, Collins has made three "Sell Florida" trips to the North and Midwest.

Collins was successful in persuading the 1955 session of the legislature to appropriate funds for an atomic reactor at the University of Florida. The 1955 Southern Governors Council meeting approved his proposal for "immediate and joint planning among the Southern states on a regional basis" to explore the possibilities of nuclear power. Resulting conferences of Southern technical and educational experts on nuclear energy have

The Misuse of Intelligence Information

SPEECH

OF

HON. STUART SYMINGTON

OF MISSOURI

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

Wednesday, January 27, 1960

Mr. SYMINGTON. Mr. President, the American people are being enticed down the trail of insecurity by the issuance of misinformation about our deterrent power; and specifically about the missile gap.

The intelligence books have been juggled so the budget books may be balanced.

This is a serious accusation, which I make with all gravity.

I realize fully that my statements on this vital matter may be labeled as politically motivated by those who prefer to conceal the facts; and by others who do not know the facts.

I choose to face that risk. It is an insignificant risk indeed compared with the unwarranted risk which this policy of misinformation has brought down upon our country.

It is well known that this has been a matter of great concern to me for years, and that I have made every effort to get the facts and to analyze them objectively.

Occasionally, after the administration's inaccuracies have been clearly and publicly labeled as such, top officials have modified their previous statements, such as occurred in the case of Secretary McElroy's admission last year about the 3-to-1 missile gap.

Mostly, however, the administration has served up reassurances and complacency; and most recently, when the existence of a serious missile gap was being generally accepted, the administration proceeded to change the ground rules for evaluating the facts.

A few events over the past 18 months are pertinent.

In late July 1958, the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency briefed me on the intelligence community's estimate of the Soviet missile capability. This analysis showed a substantial, and growing, missile gap. Based upon all the facts available to me, however, I considered that the Director had underestimated the Soviet missile development.

Accordingly, on August 6, 1958, I visited with him again, and pointed out in some detail my reasons for believing that the Soviet long-range missile development was greater than he had estimated.

A few days later, on August 8, 1958, Mr. Dulles briefed the Senate. At that time he reported figures on Soviet missile development which were the same as those I had questioned on the two previous occasions.

On August 29, 1958, therefore, I requested an appointment with the President, in order to present to him my apprehension about the planned missile gap. At that time I undertook to explain why I believed the Soviet figures as presented by Mr. Dulles were underestimated, and left with the President a long letter giving the details.

Later the White House wrote suggesting that I present this analysis to Secretary McElroy; and also to Mr. Dulles.

These followup conferences were held, but the estimates as presented by Mr. Dulles were not changed; in fact, a few weeks later, December 1958, just prior to the administration's presentation of the fiscal year 1960 budget, the estimates of Soviet ICBM capability heretofore affirmed and reaffirmed by Mr. Dulles were further adjusted downward.

This downgrading of Soviet capability at that time concerned me for several reasons: first, because it appeared probable that our deterrent posture was being weakened by the misuse of intelligence data, and, second, because the people were not being told the facts.

On January 12, 1959, the Vice President was reported as having told a press group that the United States was rapidly closing the missile gap. Immediately after this fantastic report, I told the Senate that any assertion the missile gap was being closed was inaccurate, and announced that if the administration did not publish the truth, I would reveal the projected Soviet-U.S. missile situation in percentages.

In all fairness, it should be noted that thereafter Secretary McElroy did admit to the press that the ICBM gap could well become a 3 to 1 ratio in favor of the Soviets.

On the basis of the facts available to me, I believed that Secretary McElroy's 3 to 1 ratio greatly understated the case. However, I also hoped that admission of such a planned weakness would immediately prompt a revision of our program and would cause a substitution of urgency for the existing complacency.

But no such anticipated change in our ICBM efforts resulted. Rather, the administration took another approach, namely, that of further downgrading the Soviet missile posture.

On January 13, 1960, before the House Appropriations Committee, and again on January 19 before the Senate Armed Services Committee, the new Secretary of Defense informed the Congress and the people that they were using new ground rules for interpreting intelligence data regarding Soviet ICBM's.

The new policy is to compare Soviet intent in the ICBM field as against our ICBM schedules. Prior to this, the comparison had been based upon Soviet capability in the ICBM field as against our ICBM schedules.

This amazing change to intent from capability in the method of using intelligence data enabled the administration further to cut down substantially the estimate of Soviet ICBM production.

At this point it is meaningful to compare the statement of Secretary Gates this year with the statement of Secretary McElroy 12 months ago.

On January 21, 1959, and again on January 29, 1959, Secretary McElroy testified to the Senate committee as follows:

I think it would be very dangerous if we did not proceed on this basis * * *. I think that it should be understood that from the standpoint of the Department of Defense, we are assuming, as I think we should assume, that they—meaning the opponent—will have these numbers in being at the times when the national intelligence estimates says that they could have it.

On January 13, 1960, and again on January 19, 1960, Secretary Gates revealed a radical change in policy from that announced by his predecessor. The following quotation is from Secretary Gates' testimony before the House committee on January 13:

Heretofore, we have been giving you intelligence figures that dealt with the theoretical Soviet capability. This is the first time that we have had an intelligence estimate that says, "This is what the Soviet
